SUMMARY OF NURSING SERVICE

REPORT OF HEALTH WORK IN CRAWFORD COUNTY

The visiting of the rural schools once in the fall at least and again in the spring if the roads are open is part of the regular schedule. In 1923 I did not arrive until October, but in 1924 and 1925 I made class room inspection of the village children in both Frederic and Grayling as soon as school opened.

It might be remarked that an epidemic of scarlet fever had already started when I came, which lasted all winter and covered both villages, hindering constructive work. I do not know in which one it started but it proves that neither one, nor the county can keep anything to themselves for all in the end will be affected.

Home visits in village and country are being made continually. Each year brings some general cases (one or two) of one sort or another which require more or less care.

1923 One of the first things I did was to try to get the whole country immunized against diphtheria and I started propaganda to that end. South Branch took it up and immunized practically every child in the township. I put on a play in Grayling, in December, but scarlet fever had possession of the battle ground there and most of my time all winter was spent in that fight.

I also started nutrition groups or classes for all mal-nourished children (including 80) because nutrition is at the foundation of all health, physical and mental. Protection against tuberculosis and all general well-being depend on what the body is built of. It cannot be built well without plenty of milk and vegetables, but it can do absolutely without candy and pastry. Needed sweets that are better are found in fruit, honey, etc. Sleep, exercise, and all health habits are important also in the nutrition of the body.

Hot lunch was organized in co-operation with the domestic science department and conducted through the cold weather with a definite benefit to some at least.

Building on plans of the previous nurse, Miss Judy, the building for the Health Center was secured and opened in May with a baby contest.

Little Mothers' League was organized with thirty children who earned by themselves the money for the Chase baby doll, Julia Ann Welfare.

1924 I made plans for a general health education program for the whole county which was followed some in some places.

We had a baby clinic in November, at which time about seventy children were examined. I note in going over my reports that Lovells township had 100 per cent attendance at this clinic, also they were 100 per cent immunized at the toxin-anti-toxin clinic, and by someone's good planning they raised in the fall $72.00 for health work at the Kellogg school. Most of this was used on this school. At the toxin clinic a family from Lovells did the largest share of anyone in helping to carry forward the clinic financially by contributing as much as they could toward their bill. Lovells evidently appreciates the work.

Tonsil clinics were carried on thru December and cared for about twenty children.

In agreement with Mr. Payne a Parent-Teachers association was organized in all the rural schools during the fall of 1924 (except Feldhauser and Edmonds). Through this organization a representative was asked for from each township to meet with the nursing committee and look after the interests of their community. South Branch sent a very good one. Beaver Creek called several meetings and discussed toxin-anti-toxin, with the result that they put on a clinic in December and immunized 30 children.

The Little Mothers' leagues were discontinued because for certain reasons it was necessary.

The salvage shop was organized at the health center. Here we hoped to receive clothing and assist in making it over for children and others in need. The aim was to teach them thrift as well as assist them. Such clothing sold for a few pennies—not given away. The salvage shop has not yet attained the degree of usefulness planned for it but it was after a few months turned over to the care of a day person entirely and besides supplying many needs in clothing, it has with the pennies and nickels and dimes turned in, demonstrated the wisdom of saving them by supplying funds for all the running expenses of the health center, paint for the floor, repairs, cleaning, coal, etc. In my plan for it I had in mind the making of pretty and useful garments and the teaching of sewing to some retarded children, who will never reach that department in school. We are a step nearer now by the acquisition of a sewing machine and maybe some of the activities will be carried forward on the playground this summer under the director.

In the spring of 1925 I made a house to house canvass of the two villages, preparing for the baby clinic and the toxin-anti-toxin clinic. These clinics were conducted in May, also a chest clinic.

At the chest clinic we examined 37. At the baby clinic we examined 130. At the P. T. A. clinic examined 445. At a clinic the spring before for toxin-anti-toxin and smallpox vaccination about 40 took each.

1925 Forest fires hindered work in August but a psychiatric clinic was held soon after school began and repeated before the roads closed and is supposed to continue this year. It has been postponed so far because of the lack of sufficient help from the state hospital staff at Traverse City. However, some definite good was done even at that.

October 28th, just as I was finishing my regular work for fall and ready to begin the special work, typhoid started and required considerable attention, taking 33 calls for bedside care for one family, where four children were ill at one time. Other work was of course largely dropped and some never recovered.

Just so much do epidemics hinder constructive health building. Tuberculosis also took a greater share of attention than before, though it is always with us. This year brought the first death in the county since I have been here, and I hope will be a (Continued on last page)

QUESTION OF CONSOLIDATION LOSES BY ONE VOTE

The question of consolidation of school districts Nos. four and five was defeated last week Wednesday by one vote. District No. 5, which is in the Feldhauser and Schrieber regions, voted unanimously for the proposition; District No. 4, which is sometimes called the Wakeley district, defeated it by one, the vote standing five in favor and six opposed.

It was because of the desire of some property owners living in District No. 4 to be transferred to District No. 5 that a meeting was held in that region asking those interested to assemble for the purpose of discussing the several phases of the situation, hoping that they might unite upon some uniform plan for the solution of their problem.

It seems that there are but few school children in No. 4 and also that the school house there is not in suitable condition for use. These matters and also the expense of maintaining school for a few might be more to the advantage of both districts to consolidate.

In the preliminary meeting held May 21st all those voting, all except one, expressed their desire for consolidation of the two districts. According to law each district must hold a meeting, which requires that each eligible voter in the district has to be duly notified. The special election was held in each district last week Wednesday, Dist. No. 5 voting unanimously for consolidation. In No. 4 the vote stood, as before mentioned, five in favor and six opposed.

Petitions are now on file for the transfer of the property of Arthur Wakeley and that of Mr. Knight to District No. 5. This would remove considerable property from No. 4 and likewise considerable valuation. It is a question of much importance to each of these districts in which the justice of such a transfer will be up to the township board of Grayling township.

EMPHASIZES IMPORTANCE OF TOURIST INDUSTRY

Some members of E. M. T. don't want their customers or others to ever lose sight of the importance of the tourist traffic to East Michigan and emphasize the tourist industry at every opportunity. For instance, John Carroll of Bay City, in a price list circular, issued June 21, illustrated the sheet with the picture of a fisherman and under the caption "Longest Day in the Year," says: "It don't seem like it, but summer is here and tourists from all parts of the United States and Canada will be the guests of Northern Michigan, world's greatest playground."

Liberal Purses offered for Ball Games and Sports

Ye Old Fashioned Fourth of July, modernized by the uses of modern methods and later inventions, and with a whole day of interesting sports and doings will be celebrated here next Monday. Whistles will blow and bells will chime the breaking of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence—the Sesqui-Centennial of the birth of the best country upon which God's sun was ever permitted to shine—United States of America, respected the world over and beloved by every patriotic citizen.

From the olden days when we sang

"Yankee Doodle" with a fervor of a national anthem to today when we bow in humble reverence when ever we hear "The Star Spangled Banner" has been a long stretch of time thru-out which America has steadily advanced among the nations of the world until today—150 years after its birth she stands pre-eminently a world leader. We are a nation where all men are equal. No person of sterling worth and ability is compelled, because of humble birth, to stand back while aristocracy parades their good, bad and indifferent before us to admire. Here men and women are allowed to carve their fortunes in their own sweet way and success rewards those whose ability and fortitude make them deserving.

There are no titles of nobility in America, and thank the designers of our American Constitution for that. It would be painful indeed for red-blooded Americans to have to address some as lords, dukes, and such like who may be personally in heart and soul the scum of the earth.

Whether Paul Revere was paid to make the ride or not, it makes no difference. The fact is that he made the ride through every Middlesex village and spread the alarm. What if

Grayling, Monday, July 5 Two Free Acts

This big free act will take place immediately following the street parade in the forenoon, and again during the evening band concert, at 7:30 o'clock.

Two men and one lady compose this act and it promises to be one of the greatest thrillers that has ever come to Grayling, and not excepting those seen with the best circuses.

This is to be FREE to all and is one of the entertaining features of the 4th of July celebration.

Don't miss any of the big things that are in store for the people on that day—America's 150 birthday.

Washington was sometimes profane, which is not an assured fact, and what if Franklin was at times shaky in his conduct? What difference does it make? They planned well and today we are the beneficiaries of the great legacy that they during their time laid for us.

One hundred fifty years! Who could resist celebrating such a day! The echo of the old Liberty Bell, so many years silent, brings to us a message from the fathers of our "Stars and Stripes," whose Declaration of Independence message has ever since become the orator's theme.

Old Liberty Bell is our annual reminder of the message of the Declaration of Independence, announcing the birth of a new nation, which in the words of the immortal Lincoln, is a nation "of the People by the People and for the People"—the first nation that ever put the Christ's creed of the Golden Rule into political form.

As citizens let us ever be prepared and ready to serve our country in patriotism in times of peace as well as in time of war.

And it should be a glorious day here next Monday. The band will be out; Old Glory will wave and everyone will be gay and happy. Old friends will be back again to mingle with their former neighbors, and there will be lots of entertainment and nothing to make you unhappy. If you don't like the sports, there will be plenty of comfortable seats in the courtyard for those who prefer to rest and in the afternoon there will be a dance in Temple theatre and at Lake Margrethe there will be plenty of cooling breezes, bathing and refreshments. And lots of other things that we haven't time now space to tell about at this time.

The following program will give a fair idea of some of the special entertainment awaiting visitors on that day:

WILL ATTEMPT TO BRING GRAYLING TO MICH. STREAMS

Veteran anglers of Michigan will greet with enthusiasm the announcement of the department of conservation of the purchase of 1,000,000 Montana grayling eggs for planting in streams of Michigan.

The grayling was once one of the most plentiful fish in Michigan streams. At present only one stream, the Otter river in the Upper Peninsula, is known to harbor the species. State fish laws protect the grayling in this stream, but production has not kept pace with destruction. Grayling preceded trout in the lower peninsula. The AuSable and Muskegon rivers were especially well stocked with this fish. Several reasons for their disappearance are given. Some are of the opinion the grayling were forced out by the trout. This theory is not strongly held as they are found in the Otter river side by side with the trout. Some claim logging operations in the streams brought about the destruction.

Three varieties of grayling are found on this continent. They are known as Michigan, Montana and Alaska or Arctic. The Michigan is by far the most delicate and has never been found outside the state. The Alaskan species is found in northern waters, and is known as the

ONE HUNDRED LAUGHS!!

SCENE FROM "THE BUBBLE"

Children blow soap bubbles and as they float away their eyes are so entranced by the colorful lights in the bubble that they start with disappointment when the bubble bursts. Men are not much different. The gorgeous rainbow promises of wealth in a financial bubble will some times cause the most conservative to lose his sense of values, until the bubble bursts and then comes disillusionment. Just often enough to keep the mind in doubt, the vision in The Bubble becomes a reality.

The question in the three act comedy presented on the first night of the Chautauqua is, Does the old German delicatessen keeper, Gustav Mueller, see a bubble, or is he keen enough to see reality where persons of less experience see the bubble? The eccentricities of Gustav and his wife Amelia, the romance of their daughter Rosie, and her young lover Dick, will interest and entertain you from the rise of the curtain on the first act to the finale in the third act. It is a play that is full of action. So rapidly does one funny situation follow another that at the end of two hours, when the curtain falls, you can hardly believe that it has been more than a few minutes. Only when you come to the realization that your sides are sore from laughter are you convinced that you must have been laughing for the full two hours.

A MAN OF MYSTERY

What do you know about the planet Mars? Is it inhabited? If so, by what kind of people? Are they like the men of earth in form and character? Are they subject to the same emotions? Are they peaceful or war like? Does intellect or brute force prevail? Has civilization on that planet reached the high stage that it has on earth? These as well as many other questions will be answered by the mysterious Messenger who will travel 35,000,000 miles on the fifth night of the Chautauqua to appear before our audience. His coming, as well as his going, is shrouded in mystery. Even the source of the uncanny power which he wields is mysterious. All will agree that "The Message from Mars" is from every standpoint a great play.

BAND DIRECTOR

CHARLES E. GREEN

The name of Charles E. Green has become synonymous with excellence in band music. Three years ago Green and his band appeared on the Chautauqua program in most of the towns in which they are appearing this year. So pronounced was the success of that tour that many Chautauqua Committees each year have asked for the return of the Band. In 1924, this Band toured a Community Chautauqua Circuit which includes many of the mid-west and eastern cities, including Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, Dayton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Albany, New Britain, New London and New Haven, Conn., and Springfield, Mass.

Green and His Band to Return

Green and His Band are always favorites with Chautauqua audiences in all parts of the country. Charles E. Green, the organizer of this Band, has a fine sense of program building. He knows what people like. Also he knows what they ought to like. Also he knows how to mix just enough of both to make his program entertaining and at the same time, musically right.

The afternoon and evening concerts of this Band on the third day, while including well known band selections such as "Raymond Overture" and "William Tell," are not had the pleasure of hearing Green and made up of time worn numbers. His Band in the summer of 1923. Descriptive numbers, humorous numbers, characteristic numbers and a tear of the principal cities of the novelties, as well as stirring marches, mid-west and east, where it has been enthusiastically acclaimed as one of the great bands of the country.

Great Magic Show for Chautauqua

CHINESE TORTURE CABINET

On the second day of the Chautauqua we are to have a program of magic and illusions that is very different from the ordinary entertainment of this type. William Eugene and his assistants, Leah Miles and James Quillet, present a program that has continuity. Each trick or illusion bears a definite relationship to the one that precedes or follows it. This tying together of the various parts of the program has been so masterfully done, that at the close of the entertainment you have the sense of having witnessed a complete performance, rather than a series of independent tricks. Many illusions are presented to musical accompaniment. The company carries nearly a ton of

CHAUTAUQUA ORATOR

DR. HARRY G. HILL

In his lecture on the fourth day of our Chautauqua, Dr. Hill will lead his audience on a voyage of discovery. Few people are conscious of their own hidden resources, their own undeveloped powers, and their own great possibilities. Dr. Hill possesses the faculty of treating great subjects in a simple attractive style. New faith in one's self new hope for the future new ways of success and happiness will be revealed by Dr. Hill in his inspiring lecture "AN UNDISCOVERED WORLD."

DUTCH MAIDENS

PARKINSON ENSEMBLE

A charming group of instrumentalists, the Parkinson Ensemble will present the afternoon program on the fifth day of our Chautauqua. One feature of their program will be a group of Dutch numbers presented in Dutch costumes and wooden shoes. Miss Frances Parkinson, cellist; Miss Florence Hood, violinist; and Miss Ruth Lash, pianist, are the members of this company. Well known classical selections, as well as the better popular numbers will make up their program.

WARD B. FLAXINGTON

There are two kinds of patriotism—the Patriotism of Peace and the Patriotism of War. As great as is the variance in the evidences of these two types, the fact remains that their ultimate purpose is the same service to one's country. The Patriotism of War requires a willingness to die for one's country, the Patriotism of Peace requires not only a willingness but a determination to live for one's country. Ward B. Flaxington, the orator on the second day of the Chautauqua, possesses both kinds of patriotism, and he has put both of them into practice. As a soldier in the American Expeditionary Forces of the World War he struggled in the line and the mud of the trenches. As an American citizen in peace, he is struggling in the muck of social unrest, endeavoring to analyze and throw the white light of reason upon the problems that America faces today. His clear forceful presentation of his subject inspires and commands admiration.

HARMONY MAIDS

Add to beautiful voices, splendid personalities and a sense of entertainment values commonly known as showmanship, and you have a combination that is certain to please. All of this and more is possessed by Harriett Krauth, well known Chicago soprano and Lillian May Henslein, contralto, known as Indiana's finest entertainer. These young ladies have an enviable record as entertainers before state and national conventions and other national gatherings. Together with Opal DeLong, accompanist and piano accordionist, they form an entertainment company unsurpassed in vocal solos and duets, character songs, action songs, beautifully costumed novelty numbers, piano accordion solos, effective lighting in fact everything that goes to make up a perfect entertainment program has been incorporated in the afternoon concert and the evening recital of this company on the fourth day.

A MESSAGE FROM MARS

Heretofore the dramatic productions as Aunt Martha; Edward Green as possible on Chautauqua platforms Arthur Dicey; Florence Hood as have been limited because of the lack of Bella; J. Allen Saunders as Horace stage room and the theatrical Parker and Ruth Lash as Minnie paraphernalia necessary to attain Templar. Other members of the cast special effects. With the marvelous playing the parts of Mrs. Clarence, stage and lighting effects provided by Sir Edward Vivian, Dr. Chapman, the new tent equipment being used Polly and other characters, are equally this year for our Chautauqua, this strong.

The production contains all the elements of a great play. Without taking away the element of surprise from "Mars" from a scenic and as the story unfolds, it may be said that the play, the scene of which is laid in London, depicts a self centered man, a pseudo astronomer, who is visited by an inhabitant of the planet Mars, sent to earth to accomplish a definite purpose, with the necessity of seeing his task fully completed before he may return home. The play is fantastic in its conception and its execution. For such a production the big Chautauqua tent will unquestionably be packed to capacity.

WITH THE MAGICIAN

JAMES QUELLETT-LEAH MILES

As a prelude to the magical program on the second day of the Chautauqua, and as assistants presenting musical accompaniment to some of the illusions of the magician Leah Miles, soprano, pianist and saxophonist, and James Quillet, baritone and accompanist, show unusual versatility. Miss Miles is a thoroughgoing musician and has had many years' experience in large orchestras, as well as in smaller musical organizations where her work has been featured. Mr. Quillet is a young pianist of ability, who provides a splendid accompaniment for the solo work of Miss Miles and whose voice blends perfectly with hers in pleasing vocal duets. In the magician's program in the evening, Miss Miles plays the part of the Chinese Princess who goes to her death in the mysterious Chinese Torture Cabinet with a song on her lips.

JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA

Chautauqua Enthusiasm, Rah, Rah, Rah!
Johnny has it—Sister has it—So has Pa—Junior Chautauqua, Rah, Rah, Rah!

Yes sir, Chautauqua things have begun to hum. Everbody's buying tickets for the program under the Big Brown Tent. But the children of the Junior Chautauqua are going to get ahead of the grown-up folks this year for sure, because they're going to have eight days of Chautauqua while the grown-ups will have only five.

The Chautauqua Playleader will arrive four days before the Chautauqua opens, and the very next morning the Junior Chautauqua program will start. Every boy and girl in town can attend the sessions free, meet the Playleader and enjoy the good times during the pre-Chautauqua days. After the tent arrives a ticket will be required; there will be a parade, games, stories, yells, stunts, junior town meetings, music appreciation, children's revue and frolic, and maybe a field meet or a baseball game. Juniors, get ready for eight joy days.

OLD MEXICO

On the fifth afternoon, a lecture entertainment quite different than the ordinary, will be presented by Ethel L. Irwin, who has traveled extensively in Old Mexico and through Latin American countries. Miss Irwin discusses the characteristics and habits of the Mexican people and explains their social and political institutions. It is her object to create a better understanding between the people of the United States and our Sister Republic because it is upon understanding that amity and peaceful relationships are built. Five changes of costume are used, showing the dress common to the upper or educated classes, as well as the uncultured peon class.

WITH HARMONY MAIDS

OPAL DeLONG

A delightful novelty in the program of the Harmony Maids is the work of Miss Opal DeLong, piano accordionist. She appears on the fourth day.

Feature of Greatest Catholic Session.

Chicago.—The twenty-eighth Eucharistic congress of the Roman Catholic church came to a close at Mundelein before a throng estimated at from 700,000 to 1,000,000. The final rites of the congress, a pontifical high mass followed by the procession of the blessed sacrament, began at 10 a. m. Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, were held on the grounds of St. Mary of the Lake seminary along the shores of Lake St. Mary.

In the midst of the procession a rainstorm of 15 minutes' duration accompanied by hail broke and sent the hundreds of thousands scurrying for shelter. The clerical procession, however, proceeded on its way, completing the journey as prescribed.

The route of the procession, almost three miles long, was packed with humanity, eager for the glimpse of the most and most colorful of all the Eucharistic congress demonstrations. As the end of the procession, with Cardinal Bonzano leading aloft the host, passed, the vast throng of pilgrims dropped to their knees.

In the procession were twelve cardinals, fifty-seven archbishops, three hundred priests, monks, missionaries, acolytes and laymen. At intervals of 1,000 feet along the line of march were choirs.

Completing the colorful procession were delegations from various Roman Catholic fraternal orders and several floats.

At the close of the procession Cardinal Bonzano mounted the high altar on the seminary grounds and bestowed the benediction. The sermon was preached by Cardinal Hayes of New York.

Following the ceremonies and the storm, a tremendous rush for early trains began, and for some time police and railroad officials were taxed to bring order out of chaos and start trains moving. It was finally accomplished after heroic efforts, and was considered remarkable in that no serious injury resulted to any of the vast throng assembled.

As to actual figures on the crowds carried to Mundelein, the North Shore line announced that 1,200 cars had been run to the seminary grounds carrying an estimated 145,000. From Lake Bluff a shuttle line carried 80,000. Steam roads, it was reported, carried 75,000 more. Thousands of others arrived in motor cars.

The twenty-ninth international Eucharistic Congress is to be held in 1928 at Sydney, Australia.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

To save the government's time, the Post-Office department has decided to pay salaries of all employees in 99 of the country's largest post offices by check instead of in cash, beginning July 15.

Charging that the granting of discriminatory freight rates by steamship companies is in violation of the shipping act of 1916, the United States Shipping board has determined to institute an investigation of such practices against 78 ship lines.

Led by the President and a distinguished group of high officials of this and other nations, Washington gave a rousing welcome to Lieut. Com. Richard E. Byrd on his triumphant return from the Arctic regions, where he won world acclaim by flying over the North pole.

A resolution authorizing Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois to accept the decoration of the Legion of Honor from the French government was approved by the senate.

Klansmen Forbidden to

Parade in Quaker City
Philadelphia.—The Ku Klux Klan has been denied the right by Mayor Kendrick to parade in this city or to use the sesquicentennial auditorium for its meetings at the proposed convulse next September.

Police permits to hold the Klan pageant on the parkway and at the exposition grounds have been ordered withheld and events scheduled in connection with the exposition on September 9, 10 and 11 have been stricken from the program.

Referendum Plank Is

Adopted in Wisconsin
Milwaukee, Wis.—A plank calling for a general referendum on whether the Eighteenth amendment should be repealed or the Volstead act be modified was adopted by the conservative Republican state convention after a brief fight on the floor on which it was denounced as a straddle.

Extend Alien Examination

Washington.—The State department announced that the system of examining immigrants abroad has been extended to Germany, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark and Poland.

Star Pitcher Released

Chicago.—Grover Cleveland Alexander, veteran Cub hurler, and one of the outstanding figures in major league baseball for many years, has been released on waivers to the St. Louis Cardinals.

A New York woman in divorce court said her husband slapped her face in a bridge game when she tried to take a trick that was already his. Of course this was cruelty, but then some protection ought to be devised for a fellow in such circumstances.

In a free-for-all fight in a congressional hearing at Washington the other day, the contestants hurled ink wells at each other, and doubtless they are all thankful now that there were no beer bottles around.

SAFE VACATION IS BEST VACATION

The great American migration is begun. Across the country and up and down they trek by hundreds of thousands, "sleeping where the night may find them, finding food in any fare," and drinking, as they most certainly should not, milk from any cow, and water from any drinking place. Through the agency of the automobile, the countryside is brought to the door of the city dweller, and better still, the city dweller is able to seek the countryside.

But, and here is the rub, all cows in the countryside are not healthy cows. Some of them have tuberculosis, and sometimes people, especially children, who drink milk from tuberculous cattle, themselves get tuberculosis. For years they suffer, sometimes they die, and sorrow comes to them and to their families. This is not necessary. Milk is usually be purchased from dairies that pasteurize or where the cattle are tuberculin tested. If safe milk cannot be purchased, the motorist can make it safe, can do his own pasteurizing. He can set the bottle of milk in a can of water with a cloth or bit of wood to hold the bottle off the bottom of the can, then slowly bring the water to the boiling point. At once remove the bottle and cool quickly. The cold milk can then be kept in a camp refrigerator, or a fireless cooker or a sawdust packed box.

There is yet another rub. Water from even the best appearing spring may be polluted and may carry, hidden in its sparkles, deadly typhoid. Here again danger can be easily averted. Typhoid vaccine taken before the trip is started will bring immunity. Boiling water will obviate danger, or water may be chlorinated. Carry along one quart of water in which has been dissolved one heaping teaspoonful of chlorine. A teaspoonful of this solution added to a gallon of water makes it safe for drinking after it has stood 30 minutes.

THE PASSING OF THE OLD "SPRING TONIC"

Through such things as changes of fashion the world does sometimes manage to make progress. Sometimes the changes are merely changes but again some of them are forward steps. Wedding rings will still be wedding rings, be they gold or platinum, plain or engraved. Women will still be women, be they bobbed or unbobbed. But where spring tonics are concerned, change is meaning progress. When we learned to eat our tonics rather than drink them, we made a real forward step.

In the good old days, that we trust are gone forever, we were dosed with sulphur and molasses, or biters, or sassafras tea, or some other concoction equally unpleasant. Our mothers said the stuff was good for us, said we should take it, and take the infernal stuff we did.

We were not particularly harmed, nor so far as any one knows particularly benefited either, but our mothers did their duty as they saw it, after the fashion of their day.

Now the fashion has changed. The children of today are not dosed. They eat their tonics. When spring comes now, and the death curves mount and the obituary columns lengthen, the wise mothers of the changed new fashion of today supervise with unusual care the diet that is supplied their families. Instead of molasses and sulphur, their children are fed oranges, or the tomatoes canned last fall against this very time. They are fed prunes and other dried fruits, and cabbage and lettuce and celery and onions and spinach and dandelion greens, and all the other greens obtainable. From these sources are built today the defenses against illness. These are the new spring tonics that we eat.

INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL BUREAU SENDS 5 EXECUTIVES TO EAST MICHIGAN

Miss Irene Harris of Cincinnati; Mrs. V. C. Beauthier of Chicago; and Mrs. M. E. Wardner of Detroit, June 24 completed a week's tour of East Michigan resorts between Mackinac Island and Detroit. They were accompanied by James N. Mills, general manager of the "Ask Mr. Foster" information service and T. F. Marston, secretary of the East Michigan Tourist association. The tour was made at the suggestion of the East Michigan Tourist association to enable the ladies, who are managers of the "Ask Mr. Foster" service in their cities, to secure specific information regarding East Michigan resorts. The itinerary was planned by the tourist association.

The "Ask Mr. Foster" service is an organization which transmits travel information to its patrons. The organization is international in scope. The executives of the company who visited East Michigan are now equipped with definite information to impart to their inquirers.

The idea of the trip is reflected in a statement made by Mr. Mills, who said:

"The eyes of the people of the country are on Michigan as a summer-time vacationland as never before. Requests for information regarding East Michigan have been so general that we felt it incumbent upon us to secure first hand definite information regarding these resorts so that we can transmit the information to our clientele in the principal cities of the country."

"Our visit to East Michigan resorts has been a revelation to us. The ladies are all enthusiastic over Michigan's natural recreational appeal, and over the modern conveniences, which are everywhere in evidence for the entertainment and accommodation of visitors."

"No state has more natural beauty nor better hostilities and resorts than East Michigan. The trip has been glutted with surprises in scenic appeal and outdoor beauty."

LOCAL NEWS

Plan to spend the Fourth of July in Grayling.

Miss Ruth Chamberlain is assisting in the Central drug store.

Miss Vella Hermann arrived home yesterday from Port Hope for the summer vacation, and has as her guests, Miss Bernice Lester and the Messrs. William Masten and Tod Richardson who accompanied her.

Mrs. A. J. McNelis of Detroit is visiting her mother, Mrs. Milnes. Bring your vulcanizing to us. In fact we are prepared to take care of any repair work you may have on your car. Alfred Hanson Service Station.

Mrs. Joseph McLeod was hostess to the Jolly Eight club at her home last Thursday afternoon and a pleasant time was had at "500." Mrs. Elmer Johnston held the high score and Mrs. John Benson received the consolation prize. Mrs. Joseph Kernosky will entertain the club at her home tomorrow afternoon.

Twenty-seven ladies of Fidelity chapter of the Eastern Star of Roscommon responded to an invitation from Grayling chapter to be their guests Friday evening of last week. At 8:30 o'clock a lovely banquet was served, following which initiatory ceremonies took place. Mrs. Matilda Nelson and Miss Grace Nelson were the candidates.

Dr. C. J. McCann, dentist, announces that his office will be closed between the dates of July 11th to July 25th inclusive, reopening his office Monday, July 26th. During this time extensive repairs will be made to his office.

The Chautauqua will soon be here and the Junior committee will be in charge of Miss Ruth Cavanaugh and Mr. Herbert Gothro, and a program will be lined up at once. Tickets are on sale at the drug stores, and every member of the committee will have tickets for sale. Get your tickets before you forget it. This will be the greatest Chautauqua that ever came to Grayling.

Miss Beulah Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Larson and Herbert Stephan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephan were united in marriage at home of the bride's parents Saturday evening. Rev. J. H. Baughn of the Michelson Memorial church performed the ceremony and the young people were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Serven. The bride was gown in peach colored silk crepe. The guests included just the close relatives of the bride and groom. Following the ceremony a delicious lunch was served. The young couple will reside in Grayling.

The examination of Robert Jackson, charged with having set fire to the barn of N. C. Cotabish in South Branch township on November 30th, was held at the court house Monday morning before Justice Kraus. It appears that the witnesses for the prosecution had not been subpoenaed to appear, thus only testimony by witnesses of the defense was taken. The testimony submitted consisted mainly of character witnesses, each claiming Jackson to be well liked generally. Witnesses for the people were heard Tuesday morning and considerable damaging testimony was given. Prosecuting attorney and other who heard the testimony claim that there is no question but that Jackson is guilty of the offense charged against him. Bonds were set for his appearance at the July (13) term of circuit court, which were duly filed. The case will probably not be tried until the October term, as no jury will be drawn for the July term.

HELP TO SAVE LIVES

One of the unexplained mysteries of automobile accidents at railroad crossings, is, that so many of them happen out in the open country where an approaching train may be seen in most instances from a quarter to a mile away. There is not an excuse in the world for such accidents, which can only be laid at the door of careless drivers who rush past danger signals with neither a look to the right or the left, endangering not only their own lives but the lives of those who happen to be unfortunate enough to be riding with them.

At least ninety-five per cent of the railroad crossing accidents, which cost the lives of 2,206 people in 1925 and injured 6,555 more, could have been avoided by careful driving at grade crossings. The railroads of the country are conducting a careful crossing campaign, in an effort to cut down this appalling loss of human life. The campaign should have the fullest measure of public support. Every civic organization should help to stir up public opinion by setting an example of carefulness and by teaching habits of safety to others, for strange to say, some folks have to be taught how not to commit suicide on the highways.

Mrs. Malenfant Says She Was Not Arrested

Last week this paper had an account of a number of arrests made, the parties being taken to the federal court at Bay City, including in the list the name of Mrs. Ethel Malenfant. We are pleased to state that it was an error, the information being given to us by one of the officers. Mrs. Malenfant's letter explains the incident and we are glad to publish it, which reads as follows:

Houghton Lake, Mich.
June 28, 1933.

Just a few lines to ask you to correct that mistake in the paper, as part of it is untrue, where you said that Robert Rosenthal and myself were arrested and taken to Bay City. That is false.

But Mr. Curtis is the man I hired to drive me to Grayling and he is also the man who bought the bottle and put it in his car. Mr. Rosenthal and myself were merely held as witnesses. So please correct the mistake.

It is all right, of course, to buy fuel for the car today. But be sure you are not doing it with money that should be used to pay for fuel for the body or fuel for the furnace bought months or weeks ago.

ANNUAL CHARITY PARTY

The annual summer party given by the Good Fellowship club, both afternoon and evening at the officers club house on Tuesday, June 29 was a very delightful affair, although there was a smaller crowd than is usually in attendance on these occasions.

The club house as usual presented a most beautiful appearance with its attractive decorations of wild flowers and lattice trimmed with ferns and daisies. In the afternoon a short musical program was given which included two solos by Mrs. Carl Michelson of Mason which were very much enjoyed and two trio selections sung by Mrs. Clippert, Mrs. Jarman and Miss Cavanaugh, which were also well received.

Immediately following the program the tables were filled for bridge and "500." Mrs. Axel Michelson holding the high score for bridge and Mrs. Adler Jorgenson for "500." During the lunch the ladies were entertained by several violin selections beautifully rendered by Herman Hanson.

In the evening a dancing party was given and this was a very pretty affair also. A good number of gentlemen and ladies were in attendance, and everyone appeared to be having an enjoyable time.

Schram's orchestra, with the addition of Emerson Brown on saxophone, played peppy music which kept the crowd in good spirits until 12:00 o'clock.

The club is in receipt of a neat sum of money which will be used in various ways for community work thru the year. The public is familiar with the excellent work done by this organization and is liberal in patronizing the very delightful affairs, which take place each summer.

The tract, six miles west of this city and along Sand Creek, is said to be one of the most attractive spots in this vicinity. Thirty-seven years ago Aman determined to locate a tract possessing great natural beauty, and after spending his life upon it, to turn it over to the public. He searched for 10 years before he found the Sand Creek valley.

The marriage vows were taken again at the First Federated church, the pastor, Rev. Samuel E. Kelley, officiating. Mrs. Blanchard and Mr. Piotti are sister and brother.

The 27 new, noiseless, lightweight street cars which were recently placed in service, are said to be of the most modern type developed.

Marylane park is nine miles north of Battle Creek and seven miles west of Bellevue.

Through an arrangement with the Griswold National Bank, approved by the governors of the Detroit Stock Exchange, a call money market has been established for members of the exchange. The local rate is approximately one-half of one per cent higher than the New York rate. The call money market is employed by banks to place their surplus funds. They loan usually not only for themselves but also for banks at centers where no such facilities are available.

A decided increase in tourist traffic has compelled the state to put the second ferry in service on the Straits of Mackinac run from the Lower to the Upper Peninsula, it is reported by the State Highway Department. The number of cars being transported is estimated at 85 per cent greater than at the same time last year. The first ferry was put in operation several weeks ago. Both craft have been enlarged and their capacity is double what it was in 1925.

The best kind of patriotism is that which estimates other nations not from their points of weakness but from their points of strength, declared Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburgh, in his address, "Social Imagination," delivered at the commencement exercises at the Michigan State College. "The greatest failure of the human race up to the present time," he said, "has been the failure of groups of men to live together without fighting."

FRESHENING BREEZES

The most comforting thing that Florida has heard in a long while was the announcement there was no land in the vicinity of the north pole.

What has become of the old-fashioned kid who thought that fifty cents was a whole lot of money with which to spend the Fourth?

Keeping sand out of the sugar and applying it to business methods has saved many a grocer from failure.

THE FLAPPER'S PRAYER

I want the lights that brightly shine,
I want the man I want the wine,
I want the fun without the vice,
I want to be naughty and still be nice,
I want the things that the good girls miss,
The love's embrace, the deep soul kiss,
I want the arms and the heart of a man,
And yes be single if I can,
So, as a man, give me advice,
On how to be naughty and still be nice.

I want to do what the other girls do—
Tease and cuddle up—bill and coo,
Wear bobbed hair and clocked silk hose,
Blacken my eyes and powder my nose,
Rouge my cheeks, pencil my lips,
Carry a silver flask on my hip,
Tango a little and shimmy a lot,
Park my corsets when the weather gets hot,
Ride and swim and golf and skate,
Keep my dates without ever being late.

Break all records—all but one
And be good and true when the game is done.
I don't like pepper, but I do like spice,
I want to be naughty—but I want to be nice.

THE ANSWER

The advice I give is sound and true,
You can't eat your pie, and have it too;

If you want the man and want the wine,
Why, someone must pay when you love and dine,
If the first one yields a moment's bliss,
You've got to be wiser than most girls, Miss,
It's a problem old, to be bad but nice.

Go to it kid, with your rouge and your paint,
To make you look just what you ain't,
Shimmy and drink to your heart's content,
And be hugged and squeezed until your ribs are bent,
Park your corsets on a hickory limb,
But never, my dear, go in to swim,
Bathe if you will, on the dewy green,
But you can't use mud, and come out clean.
The game you play is man's long suit
Since Eve first nibbled the forbidden fruit,
Whatever you get you will pay the price,
You can't be naughty—and still be nice.

SESQUI-CENTRAL VOTE TO OPEN EXPOSITION 7 DAYS A WEEK

First steps toward the opening of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, now being held in Philadelphia, were taken recently at a meeting of the members of the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition Committee, when that body voted to throw open the gates seven days a week and referred the matter to the executive committee which will appoint a committee to confer with churchmen who have opposed Sunday opening.

Joseph P. Gaffney, city solicitor of Philadelphia, gave an opinion that the Sunday opening is not a violation of law. "After citing numerous authorities and others that might be cited, my conclusion is that the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition is not such an unlawful sport or diversion as is contemplated by the act of 1794." The movement to open the Exposition kept open seven days a week until the closing date on December 1 was given impetus recently when virtually all of the business organizations and civic bodies petitioned Mayor Kendrick to rescind the Sunday closing order. Prominent individuals joined with the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and allied organizations in making the request.

It was pointed out in the petitions that thousands of persons would be unable to visit the Exposition grounds except on Sundays, due to the demands of their employment. Another reason put forth was that many of the visitors to Philadelphia had arranged their itinerary so that they could spend Sundays in the Exposition grounds.

Before action is taken by the executive committee, the members will confer with delegations of church people and others who are against the proposed Sunday opening.

The legal opinion submitted by Mr. Gaffney was based on the ground that the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition is not being operated as a commercial enterprise, and that it therefore did not come under the head of a business organization. It was pointed out in the petitions that the Exposition is international in scope and was established primarily as an educational institution designed to inculcate the principles of the United States Government in the minds of the visitors, as a fitting observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

MICHIGAN IN SUMMER

Recently a large number of Michigan publishers had an opportunity to visit the northern part of the Lower Peninsula, many of them for the first time, and view at first hand the wonderful things that nature has done to make this state the summer playground of the nation. The pencil pushers were in the north country for three days as guests of the Harbor Springs Chamber of Commerce, and not only did they come in contact with the beautiful region surrounding that community, but in going and coming and in side trips during their stay they saw unfolded glories of scenic nature for a hundred miles of which they had never dreamed.

Which reminds us that we seem to be just awakening to the unlimited possibilities of this state as an ideal place in which to spend the heated portion of the year. There is no particular part of the state which can be pointed out as exceeding to a large degree all the rest of Michigan. From degree all the rest of Michigan. From north to south, from east to west, thousands of inland lakes and streams vie with the coast lines of the Great Lakes region in an inviting appeal to those who would tarry for a while in search of soothing rest and comfort. Michigan invites the entire world to come here and share with us this paradise of summer loveliness.

MUSIC CLUB CONVENTION JULY 7, 8 AND 9.

Long ago, musical culture ceased to be considered a "frill." In recent years it has come to be regarded as a necessary adjunct to the healthy development of every community, and it is admitted that the city or town without a music club lacks one of its most valuable civic assets.

The Michigan Federation of Music Clubs exists for the sole purpose of spreading the gospel of Better Music. Its slogan is: "A Music Club in every city and town," and it stands ready to assist in making this desire materialize into a reality.

Among the projects sponsored by the federation are: Music Memory contests; Scholarships awarded for excellence in musical achievement; loans to poor but talented young music students; prizes for original compositions; assistance to church choirs and loans of anthems and other music; the spread of music appreciation through rural schools and communities.

These, and many other laudable aims are constantly occupying the attention of the federation members. It is earnestly hoped that this article will be published in every county seat in the state, and every musician who reads it should ask himself or herself the following questions: Have we a music club in our town? If not, why are we so behind the times? What can I do to remedy this condition? A letter addressed to Miss Eusebia Davidson, 1129 Seventh Street, Port Huron, Chairman of Extension, will bring an immediate reply, and the music federation stands ready to aid in every possible way.

The annual convention will be held in Marquette the first week in July. Every club in the state should be represented, as the meeting is sure to be entertaining from a musical standpoint, and the contact with other club workers is stimulating to the enthusiasm and very helpful in solving music club problems.

This is the first time a convention of this character has been entertained by the city of Marquette. It furnishes a splendid opportunity for visiting the beautiful and interesting Upper Peninsula country, and the rates offered by the railroads are extremely low. A twenty-nine day tourist rate will be in effect at the time of the convention. If you prefer to motor, good roads are available, and boat service is possible if preferred. The inspiration derived from contact with other music club workers, and the benefit gained by the discussion of club problems are plainly discerned throughout the entire season's activities.

If plans have not been made to have your club represented, be sure that it is done at once. A wonderful program has been arranged and Marquette is eager to have you accept her hospitality. Remember the dates are July 7th, 8th and 9th. All aboard for Marquette.

SOME MISUNDERSTANDING ABOUT COMMERCIAL LICENSE PLATES

Act 302 of the Public Acts of 1915 as amended by the legislature in 1925, which defines "commercial vehicle" as all motor vehicles used for the transportation of passengers for hire and those constructed or used for the transportation of goods, wares or merchandise, might be interpreted as prohibiting the use of pleasure cars for hauling small amounts of grain or produce to town or the hauling of sample cases, camp equipment, etc. However, this department does not place that interpretation on the law. We believe that a farmer or any other citizen has the right to use his pleasure car for the hauling of his own produce to town or for hauling other articles of merchandise for himself, without being compelled to purchase a commercial license for the car. We believe that the legislature intended this particular section to apply only to those vehicles used or constructed solely for the purpose of hauling passengers for hire or for hauling freight.

This department will not make any arrests for alleged violations of this section of the law where a pleasure vehicle may be used to haul produce or personal goods by the owner.

There seems to have been no rumors of a strike in Pennsylvania during the recent senatorial primary.

GREEN AND HIS BAND FOR CHAUTAUQUA

So great has been the demand for return engagements of Green and His Band, the famous musical organization which two years ago delighted Chautauqua audiences on the circuit of which our community is a part, the program builders have arranged for a return tour. We are very fortunate in getting this great band this season. Good music presented in a way which keeps the audience wondering what pleasing surprise is coming next, is but one of the reasons for the popularity of this band. It will be the feature on the third afternoon of our Chautauqua.

The three act dialect comedy "The Bubble" is the attraction for the opening night session. This is a delightful play, presented by an all-star cast, headed by Arthur J. Beriault, veteran character actor. Another dramatic production of quite a different type is the spectacular and fantastic play "A Message from Mars." Scarcely this is said to be one of the most pretentious presentations ever offered to Chautauqua patrons and it will undoubtedly be a fitting climax to the week's entertainment and enjoyment.

Dr. Harry G. Hill, in a psychology lecture, "An Undiscovered World" and Ward E. Plaxington in his challenge lecture "The Patriotism of Peace" and Ethel L. Irwin in an interesting travel lecture on "Mexico" will interest the lecture going and information seeking citizen.

Frye & Co., magicians and illusionists, with two musicians in the company, will provide on the second day, programs which will surprise and mystify all, while The Harmony Maids on the fourth day will present a program of songs and beautifully costumed novelty numbers which will appeal to every one.

On the whole, the dates July 14 to 18 promise to bring to this community a program of surpassing interest and one which merits and will undoubtedly draw a greater attendance than any of previous seasons.

Our idea of a well bred man is the fellow who can smile when some careless motorist dents the fenders on his parked car.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE WED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ziebell was the scene of a pretty wedding ceremony Thursday evening of last week when their youngest daughter Miss Lillian was wed to Mr. John Yuill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Yuill of Vanderbilt. Just the immediate relatives witnessed the ceremony which took place at six o'clock. Rev. J. Herman Baugh, of the Michelson Memorial church performing the ceremony.

The bride was charming in a silk chiffon gown of cream shade and she carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Joseph Gidner who was gowned in crabbapple flat crepe. Her bouquet was of pink roses. Mr. Jensen Ziebell, brother of the bride, officiated as best man. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion in the bride's chosen colors, pink and white, the rooms being fragrant with a profusion of flowers.

Following the ceremony a lovely dinner was served on a prettily decorated table. The happy young couple left that same evening on a motor trip to Canadian points, New York and Washington, D. C., expecting to be gone two weeks. On their return they will go to Vanderbilt, where they will be at home to their friends. Mrs. Yuill is a graduate of the class of '25 of Grayling high school and for the past year has been employed in one of the Michigan Central railroad offices. She is a winsome young lady, popular with her friends and no doubt will be a fine companion for the husband she has chosen.

Mr. Yuill is the son of Thomas Yuill, of the firm of Yuill Bros., of Vanderbilt, well known lumbermen and manufacturers in whose offices the young man is employed. His coming to Grayling on various occasions in the past few years has made him well and favorably known to many here.

The young couple have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Speaking of courage, how about the fellow who marries the sweet girl graduate of a cooking school?

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree had his first meeting with an enemy, Papayuchisow (young owl) fighting hard, the antagonist suddenly plunged into a swollen creek.

CHAPTER II.—Badly buffeted, and half-drowned, Baree is finally hung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost. He is alone and alone, and his life is one of fear and distress. He finally wanders into the trapping grounds of a halfbreed, Pierrot Du Quenne, and his daughter, Nepeese the Willow. Taking Baree for a wolf, Nepeese shoots and wounds him, but he escapes.

CHAPTER III.—The wolf blood in Baree becomes uppermost. He rapidly learns Nature's secrets, though he finds no comrades and is desperately lonely.

CHAPTER IV.—Following Wakayoo, the black bear, Baree subsists royally on the catches of fish the big fellow leaves. He comes again into Pierrot's trapping domain. Pierrot shoots Wakayoo. Nepeese, insisting Baree is dog, not wolf, tries to capture him. Baree is strongly drawn to the girl, but cannot entirely overcome his dread of man.

CHAPTER V.—Baree makes friends with a colony of beavers, losing much of his sense of loneliness.

CHAPTER VI.—Bush McTaggart, factor at Lac Bain, Hudson's Bay company's post, man of evil life, has long coveted Nepeese, even to the extent of offering marriage, but makes no progress with his suit. On his way to Pierrot and Nepeese, McTaggart takes Baree in a trap, and in a struggle is bitten. When the dog he comes to Pierrot's cabin.

CHAPTER VII.—Nepeese claims Baree as hers, bathing the wounds inflicted by McTaggart, after the dog had bitten him. She promises to give him a definite answer to his love-making. Nepeese lures McTaggart to the edge of a deep pool and humiliates him by plunging him into the water, at the same time taunting him for presuming to address her. Blood poisoning developing from Baree's bite, McTaggart and Pierrot hasten to Lac Bain to secure medical treatment.

CHAPTER VIII.—Nepeese has spent three winters at a mission, where she has learned to read and sew. On her seventeenth birthday she fashions a costume which properly sets forth her really great beauty.

CHAPTER IX.—Baree hears the Call of the Wild, and his wolf blood responds. He leaves Nepeese, to find a mate and hunt with the pack. Disappointed in the chase of a cougar that had been chasing in the expectation of a feast, the wolves turn on Baree. He escapes, though badly hurt, and with the Wild Call definitely extinguished.

CHAPTER X.—Baree returns to Nepeese, who nurses him back to life. A fellow trapper, Debar, visits Pierrot. He has a message from McTaggart ordering Pierrot to go to Lac Bain at once on business. Pierrot is suspicious, but goes. In his absence, McTaggart visits the cabin and is inflamed by a sight of the girl in all the splendor of her new costume.

CHAPTER XI.—McTaggart tells Nepeese he has come to take her for his wife, and attempts to seize her. Baree springs at him. The factor shoots the dog and thinks him dead. While McTaggart struggles with Nepeese, Pierrot returns. Maddened at the sight, the factor attacks McTaggart. In the fight the factor shoots and kills Pierrot. Nepeese makes her escape with McTaggart in pursuit. On the verge of capture, the girl plunges into a pool, to what seems certain death.

Chapter XII

A moment later the Factor from Lac Bain stood at the edge of the chasm. His voice had called out in a hoarse yell—a wild cry of disbelief and horror that had formed the Willow's name as she disappeared. He looked down, clutching his huge red hands and staring in ghastly suspense at the boiling water and black rocks far below. There was nothing there now—no sign of her, no last flash of her pale face and streaming hair in the white foam. And she had done that—to save herself from him!

The soul of the man-beast turned sick within him, so sick that he staggered back, his vision blinded and his legs tottering under him. He had killed Pierrot, and it had been a triumph; all his life he had played the part of the brute with a stoicism and cruelty that had known no shock—nothing like that overwhelmed him now, numbing him to the marrow of his bones until he stood like one paralyzed. He did not see Baree. He did not hear the dog's whining cries at the edge of the chasm. For a few moments the world turned black for him; and then, dragging himself out of his stupor, he ran frantically along the edge of the gorge, looking down wherever his eyes could reach the water, striving for a glimpse of her. At last it grew too deep. There was no hope. She was gone—and she had faced that to escape him!

He mumbled that fact over and over again, stupidly, thickly, as though his brain could grasp nothing beyond it. She was dead. And Pierrot was dead. And he, in a few minutes, had accomplished it all.

He turned back toward the cabin—not by the trail over which he had pursued Nepeese, but straight through the thick bush. Great flakes of snow had begun to fall. He looked at the sky, where banks of dark clouds were rolling up from the south and east. The sun went out. Soon there would be a storm—a heavy snowstorm. The big flakes falling on his naked hands and face set his mind to work. It was lucky for him, this storm. It would cover everything—the fresh trails, even the grave he would dig for Pierrot.

It does not take such a man as the Factor long to recover from a moral concussion. By the time he came in sight of the cabin his mind was aglow at work on physical things—on the necessities of the situation. The appalling thing, after all, was not that both Pierrot and Nepeese were dead, but that his dream was shattered. It was not that Nepeese was dead, but that he had lost her. This was his vital disappointment. The other thing—his crime—it was easy to cover.

It was not sentiment that made him dig Pierrot's grave close to the prince's mother's under the tall spruces. It was not sentiment that made him dig the grave at all, but caution. He buried Pierrot decently. Then he poured Pierrot's stock of kerosene where it would be most effective and touched a match to it. He stood in the edge of the forest until the cabin was a mass of flames. The snow was falling thickly. The freshly made grave was a white mound, and the trails were filling. For the physical things he had done there was no fear in Bush McTaggart's heart as he turned back toward Lac Bain. No one would ever look into the grave of Pierrot du Quenne. And there was no one to betray him if such a miracle happened. But of one thing his black soul would never be able to free itself. Always he would see the pale, triumphant face of the Willow as she stood facing him in that moment of her glory when, even as she was choosing death rather than him, he had cried to himself: "Ah! Is she not wonderful!"

As Bush McTaggart had forgotten Baree, so Baree had forgotten the Factor from Lac Bain. When McTaggart had run along the edge of the chasm, Baree had squatted himself in the foot-beaten plot of snow where Nepeese had last stood, his body stiffened and his forehead braced as he looked down. He had seen her take the leap. Many times that summer he had followed her in her daring dives into the deep, quiet water of the pool. But this was a tremendous distance. She had never dived into a place like that.

He could see the black heads of the rocks, appearing and disappearing in the whirling foam like the heads of monsters at play; the roar of the water filled him with dread; his eyes caught the swift rush of crumbled ice between the rock walls. And she had gone down there!

He had a great desire to follow her, to jump in, as he had always jumped in after her. She was surely down there, even though he could not see her. Probably she was playing among the rocks and hiding herself in the white froth and wondering why he didn't come. But he hesitated—hesitated with his head and neck over the abyss, and his forehead giving way a little in the snow. With an effort he dragged himself back and whined. He whined—his short, sharp signal with which he always called her. There was no answer. Again and again he barked, and always there was nothing but the roar of the water that came back to him. Then for a few moments he stood back, silent and listening, his body shivering with the strange dread that was possessing him.

The snow was falling now, and McTaggart had returned to the cabin. After a little Baree followed in the trail he had made along the edge of the chasm, and wherever McTaggart had stopped to peer over, Baree paused also. For a space his hatred of the man was burned up in his desire to join the Willow, and he continued along the gorge until, a quarter of a mile beyond where the Factor had last looked into it, he came to the narrow trail down which he and Nepeese had many times adventured in quest of rock-violets. The twisting path that led down the face of the cliff was filled with snow now, but Baree cleared his way through it until at last he stood at the edge of the unfrozen torrent. Nepeese was not here. He whined, and barked again, but this time there was in his signal to her an uneasy repression, a whimpering note which told that he did not expect a reply. For five minutes after that he sat on his haunches in the snow, stolid as a rock. What it was that came down out of the dark mystery and tumult of the chasm to him, what spirit-whispers of nature that told him the truth, it is beyond the power of reason to explain. But he listened, and he looked; and his muscles twitched as the truth grew in him; and at last he raised his head slowly until his black muzzle pointed to the white storm in the sky, and out of his throat there went forth the quivering, long-drawn howl of the husky who mourns outside the tepee of a master who is newly dead.

On the trail, heading for Lac Bain, Bush McTaggart heard that cry and shivered. It was the smell of smoke, thickening in the air until it stung his nostrils, that drew Baree at last away from the chasm and back to the cabin. There was not much left when he came to the clearing. Where the cabin had been was a red-hot, smoldering mass. For a long time he sat watching it, still waiting and still listening. He no longer felt the effect of the bullet that had stunned him, but his senses were undergoing another change now, as strange and unreal as their struggle against that darkness of near-death in the cabin. In a space that had not covered more than an hour the world had twisted itself grotesquely for Baree. That long ago the Willow was sitting before her little mirror in the cabin, talking to him and laughing in her happiness, while he lay in vast contentment on the floor. And now there was no cabin, no Nepeese, no Pierrot. He did not go nearer to the smoldering mass of the cabin, but sinking low, made his way about the circle of the open to the dog-corral. This took him under the tall spruce. For a full minute he paused here, sniffing at the freshly made mound under its white mantle of snow. When he went on, he slunk still lower, and his ears were flat against his head.

The dog-corral was open and empty. McTaggart had seen to that. Again Baree squatted back on his haunches and sent forth the death-howl. This time it was for Pierrot. In it there was a different note from that of the howl he had sent forth from the chasm: it was positive, certain. In the chasm his cry had been tempered with doubt—a questioning hope, something that was so almost human that McTaggart had shivered on the trail. But Baree knew what lay in that freshly dug snow-covered grave. A scant three feet of earth could not hide its secret from him. There was death—death and unequivocal. But for Nepeese he was still hoping and seeking.

Until noon he did not go far from the cabin, but only once did he actually approach and sniff about the black pile of steaming fumes. Again and again he circled the edge of the clearing, keeping just within the bush and timber, sniffing the air and listening. Twice he went back to the chasm. Late in the afternoon there came to him a sudden impulse that carried him swiftly through the forest. He did not run openly now; caution, suspicion and fear had roused in him afresh the instincts of the wolf. With his ears flattened against the side of his head, his tail drooping until the tip of it dragged the snow, and his back sagging in the curious, evasive gait of the wolf, he scarcely made himself distinguishable from the shadows of the spruce and balsams.

There was no faltering in the trail Baree made; it was straight as a rope might have been drawn through the forest, and it brought him, early in the dusk, to the open spot where Nepeese had fled with him that day she had pushed McTaggart over the edge of the precipice into the pool. In the place of the balsam shelter of that day there was now a water-tight birch-bark tepee which Pierrot had helped the Willow to make during the summer. Baree went straight to it and thrust in his head with a low and expectant whine.

There was no answer. It was dark and cold in the tepee. He could make out indistinctly the two blankets that were always in it, the row of big tin boxes in which Nepeese kept their stores, and the stove which Pierrot had improvised out of scraps of iron and heavy tin. But Nepeese was not there. And there was no sign of her outside. The snow was unbroken except by his own trail. It was dark when he returned to the burned cabin. All that night he hung about the deserted dog-corral, and all through the night the snow fell steadily, so that by dawn he sank into it to his shoulders when he moved out into the clearing.

With day the sky had cleared. The sun came up, and the world was almost too dazzling for the eyes. It warmed Baree's blood with new hope and expectation. His brain struggled even more eagerly than yesterday to comprehend. Surely the Willow would be returning soon! He would hear her voice. She would appear suddenly out of the forest. He would receive some signal from her. One of these things, or all of them, must happen. He stopped sharply in his tracks at every sound, and sniffed the air from every point of the wind. He was traveling ceaselessly.

His body made deep trails in the snow around and over the huge white mound where the cabin had stood; his tracks led from the corral to the tall spruce, and they were as numerous as the footprints of a wolf-pack for half a mile up and down the chasm.

On the afternoon of this day the second big impulse came to him. It was not reason, and neither was it instinct alone. It was the struggle half-way between the brute mind fighting at its best with the mystery of an intangible thing—something that could not be seen by the eye or heard by the ear. Nepeese was not in the cabin.

She Was Not at the Tepee.

because there was no cabin. She was not at the tepee. He could find no trace of her in the chasm. She was not with Pierrot under the big spruce. Therefore, unreasoning but sure, he began to follow the old trap-line into the north and west.

No man has ever looked clearly into the mystery of death as it is implanted upon the senses of the northern dog. It comes to him, sometimes, with the wind; most frequently it must come with the wind, and yet there are ten thousand masters in the northland who will swear that their dogs have given warning of death hours before it actually came; and there are many of these thousands who know from experience that their teams will stop a quarter of a mile from a stranger cabin in which there is an unburied dead. Yesterday Baree had smelled death, and he knew without process of reasoning that the dead was Pierrot. How he knew this, and why he accepted the fact as inevitable, is one of the mysteries which at times seem to give the direct challenge to those who concede nothing more than instinct to the brute mind. He knew that Pierrot was dead without exactly knowing what death was. But of one thing he was sure: he would never see Pierrot again; he would never hear his voice again; he would never hear again the swish-swish-swish of his snowshoes in the trail ahead, and so on the trap-line he did not look for Pierrot. Pierrot was gone forever. But Baree had not yet associated death with Nepeese. He believed that Nepeese was alive, and he was now just as sure that he would overtake her on the trap-line as he was positive yesterday that he would find her at the birch-bark tepee.

Since yesterday morning's breakfast with the Willow, Baree had gone without eating; to appease his hunger meant to hunt, and his mind was too filled with his quest of Nepeese for that. He would have gone hungry all that day, but in the third mile from the cabin he came to a trap in which there was a big snowshoe rabbit. The rabbit was still alive, and he killed it and ate his fill. Until dark he did not miss a trap. In one of them there was a lynx; in another a fisher-cut; out on the white surface of a lake he sniffed at a snowy mound under which lay the body of a red fox killed by one of Pierrot's poison baits. Both the lynx and the fisher-cut were alive, and the steel chains of their traps clanked sharply as they prepared to give Baree battle. But Baree was uninterested. He hurried on, his uneasiness growing as the day darkened and he found no sign of the Willow.

It was a wonderfully clear night after the storm—cold and brilliant, with the shadows standing out as clearly as living things. The third idea came to Baree now. He was, like all animals, largely of one idea at a time—a creature with whom all lesser impulses were governed by a single leading impulse. And this impulse, in the glow of the starlit night, was to reach as quickly as possible the point of Pierrot's two cabins on the trap-line. There he would find Nepeese!

We won't call the process by which Baree came to this conclusion a process of reasoning; instinct or reasoning, whatever it was, was a fixed and positive faith came to Baree just the same. He began to miss the traps in his haste to cover distance—to reach the cabin.

It was twenty-five miles from Pierrot's burned home to the first trap-cabin, and Baree had made ten of these by daylight. The remaining fifteen were the most difficult. In the open spaces the snow was belly-deep and soft; frequently he plunged through drifts in which for a few moments he was buried.

Three times during the early part of the night Baree heard the savage dirge of the wolves. Once it was a wild paean of triumph as the hunters pulled down their kill less than half a mile away in the deep forest. But the voice no longer called to him. It was repellent—a voice of hatred and of treachery. Each time that he heard it he stopped in his tracks and snarled, while his spine stiffened.

At midnight Baree came to the tiny amphitheater in the forest where Pierrot had cut the logs for the first of his trap-line cabins. For at least a minute Baree stood at the edge of the clearing, his ears very alert, his eyes bright with hope and expectation, while he sniffed the air. There was no smoke, no sound, no light in the one window of the log shack. His disappointment fell on him even as he stood there; again he sensed the fact of his aloneness of the barrenness of his quest. There was a disheartened slouch to his body as he made his way through the snow to the cabin door. He had traveled twenty-five miles, and he was tired.

The snow was drifted deep at the doorway, and here Baree sat down and whined. It was no longer the anxious, questioning whine of a few hours ago. Now it voiced hopelessness and a deep despair. For half an hour he sat shivering with his back to the door and his face to the starlit wilderness, as if there still remained the fleeting hope that Nepeese might follow after him over the trail. Then he burrowed himself a hole deep in the snowdrift and passed the remainder of the night in uneasy slumber.

"We Serve Michigan"

Building Up Markets

THE constituent lines of the Michigan Railroad Association will expend nearly $25,000,000 this year for additions and betterments to the respective properties. These outlays will provide for greater safe-guards to human life, more comfort for the traveling public, increased facilities and better freight service.

Michigan Railroads may justly claim more than their modest slogan—We Serve Michigan. They have contributed to the upbuilding of the industries of the Commonwealth, as perhaps no other group of rail lines in America has done. Two decades of tremendous industrial expansion justified this far-sighted policy of the railroads.

In encouraging industrial up-building, the railroads have also, in a measure, created a Home Market that absorbs the bulk of the products of our farms, orchards, gardens, etc., right at home. So true is this that with increased production, the railroads are annually hauling farm commodities less and less. All of these—except the hay crop—are consumed at home.

THIS tremendous Home Market is the ideal market. But the expansion policy means more. It has created an outlet for similar products grown in other states. The track market at Detroit, for instance, handles 40 different perishable commodities from the cars direct to the dealers—a single transfer only. To illustrate: Fresh tomatoes are found at the green grocers for seven months in the year, thanks to expedited service and the refrigerator car. Shipments are made from Old Mexico and five southern states before the Michigan crop has matured. This is so for the entire list of fruits and vegetables.

With our present railroad system the average wage earner of today enjoys a far wider range of delicacies on his table the year round than did the Kings and Nobles of Europe of a century or more ago.

THE Michigan Railroad Association, then, takes justifiable pride in announcing its program of improvements and betterments for the current year which will further aid the state's industrial advancement, give even greater importance to the Home Market, and contribute still more towards raising the standard of living of all the people.

Six Rules For Preventing Fire In The Forests

1. Matches—Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.
2. Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves, or needles.
3. Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.
4. Breaking Camp—Never break camp until your fire is out—dead out.
5. Brush Burning—Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.
6. How to Put Out a Camp Fire—Stir the coals while soaking them with water. Turn small sticks and drench both sides. Wet the ground around the fire. If you can't get water stir in dirt and tread it down until packed tight over and around the fire. Be sure the last spark is dead.

Michigan is the nation's playground. Last year 2,500,000 vacationists enjoyed Michigan's natural beauty. And summer visitors spent $200,000,000 last year in Michigan.

For here are giant forests . . . wooded wilderness rich in primitive attraction . . . wild life . . . an ideal vacation land.

It is the duty of each resident of Michigan to preserve this natural beauty. For each resident benefits by Michigan's resources.

Last year forest fires burned over 725,928 acres. These fires in addition destroyed a proportionate amount of property and the cost to suppress them alone amounted to $125,042.88.

warning to build up nutrition and not ignore its early signs for nutrition is the foundation of health and first step in the prevention of tuberculosis and many other ills.

This winter we had an epidemic of German measles, which was in no way serious, but, having no symptoms, defied control. It came up continually like mushrooms, overnight. Red measles got a start later, but was carefully watched, and so far has been confined to a half dozen children.

A few cases of whooping cough have been reported but not until they were nearly well. It has not been in school. However, it is often in the summer that these things are spread when the children are not under the close observation of the teachers and nurse. It is only by prompt reporting and watching the such things for which there are no vaccines, can be controlled.

Diphtheria was in three families in Grayling in 1923. In the spring of 1925 it was in the county, resulting in one death because of closed roads and lack of immunity. Last fall one case came into Grayling from Detroit, but it came into an immunized home and nothing more was heard of it. In Frederic there was one case in an unimmunized family. Nearly all the children in the county are immunized for diphtheria, but there still remains some very little children in Grayling and throughout the county who should be given attention. Some people think that any serum given protects against everything. It does not. Immunizing by serum is a scientific application of nature's own method and is perfectly safe. All children should get all immunity available as early as possible, vaccination and toxin-anti-toxin in the first year. They would not mind it and would then be safe from some of the most dangerous diseases.

Education is necessary. Study all you can about each disease. It is here that the home hygiene classes have helped much I believe, where we have threshed out these questions until, I hope, we now understand.

As soon as scarlet fever serum is easily available that safety also should be secured to the little ones early and probably had tonsils, operation for removal, or the numerous more or less serious ills of later life would thus be avoided, for scarlet fever is to blame for many of the bad tonsils and they in turn for rheumatism, gall bladder infection, diseased kidneys, and a not yet fully known list of ills, but the list is growing continually. At present diseased tonsils should be examined by a doctor and his advice followed in regard to them. To do this is an economy, often saving many calls for the physician during the year and many diseases in later life that cannot be cured by calling the physician, and possibly by a great shortening of life itself.

The remainder of this year, besides putting my records in shape, I hope to see that many tonsil cases are cared for. It is not possible to see to all, but I urge every one now to consider any in your family seriously and attend to them. I would urge all the women and the older girls especially, to use any opportunity to attend a home hygiene class. Those who have taken the work this year all feel that they have gained much. It is not alone in knowing how to handle the sick, but in how to prevent sickness that the advantage lies.

The main job of the year has been home hygiene classes which can be reported in a few words and with few figures, but I think my students will agree that it has not been done with little labor. Forty-eight students were enrolled in two adult classes in Grayling and one adult and one night school class in Frederic. Two or three of those in Grayling had been in previous classes at war time, but one is here to tell you she found many new things to learn. Out of these seventeen today receive certificates and some receive school credit.

This spring we secured the services of Dr. Florence Butler (McCann) and with the donation of a dental chair now have a dental clinic for the Grayling school. I hope it may develop to larger usefulness, but I urge you all to keep the children's teeth repaired and get the work done early. Discharging teeth are one of the causes of malnutrition.

Now with a number of home calls, tonsil cases, and putting the finishing touch to things I expect to be sufficiently busy but if time permits I shall be glad to give some work in home hygiene who are still here. I would urge you all to make the acquaintance of the new nurse at once. It was nearly two years before I was able to be of service to some parts of the county and there are some things yet undone that I could have and should have done had it been possible. I wish I could have accomplished more and I am sure that those who cooperate most with the nurse get the most out of her service. The result of my work could easily have been doubled by cooperation even though this community has been an unusually cooperative one, and it is not in a spirit of complaint but a tip as to how to get the most for your money, that I am saying this. I beg of you not to regret my going and consider the new nurse a stranger but let her pick up the work just as I lay it down and go on. There is for each of you only one face to remember, but for her there are many. Assist her all you can.

There are also trails to learn. Parent-Teachers Association and Junior Red Cross I appeal to you to assist me before I leave to label all the school roads for her and so save her time. Try to get your Parent-Teachers Association units together and meet her.

If as many tell me you appreciate the work I have done, and if you attach to the work and how much you help it on. Only by cooperation can we work together and in order to cooperate we have, like a great family, to put aside the unessential points. We can find no one who is perfect. We must use the good that is in us all and overcome and overlook the imperfect. We must help each other in a charitable way, without prejudice, but trying to see each other in the eyes of truth. We must look to the greater issues, forget ourselves and our petty differences, and not let the little details of our home or locality enter into the solution of the problems and projects of the larger group.

Our little lives are unimportant. They are of value only as they amount to something in the world. We are not here to please ourselves; we live not to ourselves. When we were children we were taught that we amounted to something only as "the world was made better by our having lived in it." Ever since then life and school have been teaching us the same only putting it stronger all the while. Our country's creed is "the greatest good to the greatest number." We are taught that the child is born not for the parent only but for the state ultimately, that it is the parent's to train rather than to possess—to train for usefulness in the world and only as they fulfill that duty are they patriots. It is demanded of every American that he be 100 per cent. Those who offered their lives for their country did their patriotic duty. Those who bring up children to be useful citizens do the same. Those who do any work faithfully and to their country's good do the same—they do their bit. It does not matter whether they die for their country or live for it, living is the harder task. Those whose lives are a service to their country are giving service to the world and to God for He has said that what we have done for these we have done for Him.

Parents are the patriots who do the greatest (or traitors if they rear their children to harm instead of good) and teachers and nurses are co-parents and the Parent-Teachers association is the chain that binds all into one complete unit of service to the future generations and to God.

LONG-DISTANCE INQUIRY RECORD

Mails received at the office of the East Michigan Tourist association from residents of other places interested in East Michigan as a summer playground are interesting. The long-distance inquiry record of the season arrived June 21, when a letter from John C. Stoer, Port of Spain, Trinidad, British West Indies, asked for information. Mr. Stoer will visit East Michigan for a long vacation about July 1, he says. His inquiry was elicited by advertising of the association which he saw in a magazine.

What a splendid idea it would be if all the new graduates would agree to start in as low as five thousand a year.
